

Alumni Continuity Guide

The Brand Blueprint is your founder-facing ecosystem, Value Growth Partners is the advisory and execution engine behind it, and Growth OS turns plans into operating infrastructure. This guide covers what continues after a cohort ends, what changes, and how to keep the operating gains from decaying once the weekly structure is gone.

What ends and what continues

	During the cohort	After graduation
Cadence	Set by the session schedule.	Yours to hold — SH-02 replaces the schedule.
Accountability	Peer group and facilitator.	Alumni peer pairing, if you arrange it.
Library access	Full member access.	Full member access, unchanged.
Partner routing	Available.	Available.
Assessment	Rubric scored at module 07.	Self-scored at each quarterly reset.

The decay problem

The most common post-cohort pattern is a strong first month, a quiet second, and a return to pre-cohort operating by the fourth. The cause is almost never motivation. It is that the cohort supplied the rhythm, and when it ended nothing replaced it.

- Within one week of graduating, put your weekly and monthly blocks in the calendar as recurring holds. Do it before the last session's energy fades.
- Pair with one alumni founder for a monthly thirty-minute check. Short and regular beats long and occasional.
- Re-score the rubric (ACC-03) at each quarterly reset. It is the same instrument used at graduation, so the comparison is honest.
- Pick the next single layer to move from SH-04. One per quarter.

Staying useful to the network

- Keep your directory entry current (ACC-05) so routing to you actually works.
- Take the peer-review seat for a later cohort if invited — reviewing others' work is the cheapest way to see your own blind spots.
- Flag gaps you hit that the library does not close. That is how the library improves.

A realistic expectation

Graduating means you have been through a structured process and produced a set of artifacts. It is not a credential, a certification, or a signal to third parties about your company's prospects. What it is worth is what you keep doing with it.
